TO THE INDEPENDENT ELECTORS
OF THE CITY OF SYDNEY.

GENTLEMEN,—The contest is ended. I retire with feelings of the deepest gratitude toward those friends who have assisted me in the late struggle to obtain for this important city a commercial representative.
Although from circumstances wholly unexpected at the time I acceded to your request to become a candidate, that effort has for the present been unsuccessful, I am not the less sensible of the great and disinterested exertions made by you on my behalf. Nor without a hope that at no distant day we may witness the triumph of the cause in which we have been engaged.
I am, Gentlemen,
Your obliged and faithful servant,
JOHN LAMB.
Spencer Lodge, Miller's Point. 1726

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.

MR. J. EMANUEL, Surgeon Dentist, begs most respectfully to inform his numerous connexion and the public generally, that he has removed from Castlereagh-street North to 222, Elizabeth-street North, one door from Mr. WALLIS, builder, and eight doors from Hunter-street. 1606

MAITLAND.

THE Undersigned having taken the STORES at EAST MAITLAND, lately occupied by Mr James Barker, begs to inform the public of Maitland and the district, that the Stores are NOW RE-OPENED with a NEW STOCK of FRESH GOODS.
The Stores will be found to contain a general assortment of every description of Goods, and which will be sold at the lowest remunerative profit; and trusts by civility and strict attention to his customers to ensure a share of the patronage bestowed upon his predecessor.

GEORGE D. CRAIG,
Late Barker's Stores,
286 East Maitland.

SIMMONDS AND CO,
COMMISSION MERCHANTS AND GENERAL AGENTS,
6, Barge-yard, Bucklersbury, London,

SOLICIT a continuance of those kind favours which had been bestowed upon their firm for so many years past, and will be happy to receive and execute orders and commissions for all descriptions of goods that may be required by the inhabitants of New South Wales. As theirs is the only Agency House in London, specially devoted to commission business for the Australasian Provinces, which has a general knowledge of the wants and requirements of the colonies, they trust that, independent of the special claims to the support of the proprietors, merchants, and public generally, they shall be favoured with a continuance of the commission of their friends.
☞ All orders accompanied by a remittance, or reference for payment, will be most promptly and punctually attended to. 1201

ROSE BAY HOTEL.

THOMAS MARTIN begs to intimate that he has opened the house and grounds formerly occupied by Thomas Holt, Esq., situated at Rose Bay, only three and a half miles from the city.
Wedding, Pic-nic, and other parties in pursuit of pleasure, will find it an agreeable retreat.
For the accommodation of those gentlemen who may feel disposed to walk or ride out in the forenoon of a Sunday, T. M. purposes furnishing an ordinary at one o'clock.
N.B.—A good Larder, extensive stabling, and an unlimited supply of spring water on the premises; and every article furnished of the best quality at moderate charges. 1375

WILLIAM DAVIS begs most respectfully to acquaint his friends and the public, that he has commenced business as a licensed victualler, and trusts by civility and attention to receive that patronage which it has ever been his study to merit.
Having procured the choicest wines, spirits, and ales, &c., he would now solicit them to test the same at the

GAS HOTEL,
KENT-STREET NORTH,
Generally known by the
ILLUMINATED CLOCK.

N. B.—A spacious Commercial Room, with a private entrance; and, should sufficient inducement offer, an ordinary at 1 o'clock every day.
Arrangements have been made to receive the London Bell's Life and other papers regularly. 1890

CHAMBERS' WORKS.
Will be landed in a few days, the whole of the Works of the above popular publishers, full particulars of which will appear in a future advertisement.

SHIPS' MAILS.

Mails will be closed at the Post Office as follows:—

For Hobart Town.—By the Emma, this evening, at six.

For Auckland.—By the Louisa, this evening, at six.

For Port Nicholson.—By the Louis and Miriam, to-morrow evening, at six.

For London.—By the Lady Margaret, this day, at noon, by the Jane Cain, this evening, at six; and by the Honduras, (P.O.P.), on Saturday next, at six.

For the Indian Ports and England (overland).—By the Lima, for Singapore, and by the Hyderabad, for Madras, to-morrow evening, at six.

For Tahiti.—By the Mary Ann, this evening, at six.

For Valparaiso and England via Panama.—By the John Dalton, on Saturday evening next, at six.

The Jane has returned to port after an absence of twenty-one months, with 880 barrels sperm oil. She has spoken no colonial whalers but what have already been reported, but on the 2nd June fell in with the American ship Rosalie, Macher, of Rhode Island, thirty months out, with 600 barrels sperm oil.

The Leocadia is one of the vessels belonging to the Society of Oceania, and connected with the Roman Catholic Missions among the South Sea Islands. She has come to this port for specie, &c., and will sail again in a few days for Tahiti. Captain Fleury reports the barque Lucy Ann, Beires, hence the 7th September last, having touched at Anatam for wood and water on the 15th June, having on board 300 barrels sperm oil; and on the 1st July, the brig Margaret, Jamieson, three and a half months from Sydney, clean.

The Champion left Brisbane on the 15th ultimo, but was detained seven days under Moreton Island, in consequence of strong south-west gales. Her cargo comprises 210 hides, 34 casks tallow, 55½ bales wool, 21 bundles sheepskins, and 1 cask oil. The schooners Secret and Elizabeth Jane, hence, arrived at Moreton Bay on the 22nd, and the Clarissa and Columbine on the 23rd ultimo. The schooner Frederick Griffiths was lying inside the bar of the Tweed when the Champion passed on the 25th ultimo.

The Mary Ann.—This regular trader between this port and Sydney is now loaded and ready to start for Sydney the first fair wind. Before her return her spirited and obliging owner, Mr. W. Dalton, intends to put into her two new masts, and to do other necessary repairs, and as the schooner is the only means of transit for passengers to and fro to the metropolis and this port, he intends to fit up a ladies' cabin, the want of which has been so long felt.—Port Macquarie Correspondent.

THE ELECTIONS.

COUNTY OF CUMBERLAND.

The following was the state of the poll at the different polling places, at its close at 4 o'clock, yesterday. Mr. Cowper and Mr. Lawson being the elected members. At Sydney and St. Leonard's, Mr. Smith was 159 a head of Mr. Lawson; but at the other places the latter had a majority over the former of 226. The result will occasion much disappointment and regret not only to Mr. Smith, but to a large and respectable body of the colonists.

	Cowper.	Lawson.	Smith.
Sydney	344	229	328
St. Leonard's	80	17	77
Parramatta	84	127	14
Liverpool	22	18	9
Penrith	47	54	19
Windsor	41	61	14
Campbell Town	34	50	28
	632	556	489

The poll will be declared at Parramatta on Friday, at 12 o'clock.

CUMBERLAND BOROUGHS.

WINDSOR.

The polling for the above took place at Windsor (as well as at Richmond, Liverpool, and Campbelltown) on Tuesday, and we have to announce that Mr. Bowman has been returned—indeed we may almost say he has been elected by unanimous consent. At 11 o'clock A.M., when the Returning Officer, S. North, Esq., was about to announce the state of the poll as under:—

For Mr. Bowman .... 29 votes,
Fitzgerald .... Nil,

Mr. Fitzgerald rose, (being on the Bench on the left of the Returning Officer) and begged to ask by what authority he had been named in opposition to Mr. Bowman? He denied that he was a candidate; and those who had nominated him were no friends of his. At present he had no ambition for representing the Cumberland Boroughs; in fact, he had just recorded his vote in favour of Mr. Bowman. He concluded his short, well-timed, and manly speech, by requesting the Returning Officer, as a magistrate, not to name him at all in the proceedings of the day, as it might tend to raise a commotion among the people, many of whom he believed were anxious that he should come forward.

We need scarcely say that Mr. Fitzgerald, by his short address, removed many current opinions detrimental to his known popularity among the inhabitants of the district,—for having himself signed Mr. Bowman's requisition, and then for him to peril his election by pandering to the fawning addresses of a few of the electors, and even non-electors, raised a feeling of disgust among those who would have been his warmest supporters had he come forward voluntarily in the first instance. It is but proper to remark here, that Mr. Bowman would never have allowed himself to be put in nomination had he anticipated in the most remote manner any opposition from his friend, Mr. F. However, we give the result of the poll:—

	Windsor.	Richmond.	Total
For Mr. Bowman	40	35	75
Fitzgerald	Nil	Nil	Nil

Majority for Mr. Bowman..75

We ought to have before remarked that Mr. Jeames, of Cook and Westmoreland, after having addressed a congregation of non-electors, under Ridge's Hotel verandah, on Monday afternoon, canvassed the town with a few (un) popular followers, but the result of their endeavours being so very unsatisfactory, they decided no later than 8 o'clock at night to abandon their spirited enterprise.

ELECTION FOR NORTHUMBERLAND.

(From the Maitland Mercury.)

We have heard that the following was the result of the polling on Monday in three of the polling-places for the county of Northumberland. Up to last evening we had not heard how the poll stood at Gosford, Wollombi, or the Macdonald:—

	Dangar.	Vallack.
Maitland	58	24
Singleton	29	23
Newcastle	11	0
	98	47

There can be therefore little doubt that Mr. Dangar has been the successful candidate. The poll will be declared by the Returning Officer on Friday, at twelve o'clock, from the hustings, East Maitland.

ELECTION FOR HUNTER, BRISBANE, AND BLIGH.

(From a Correspondent of the Maitland Mercury.)

Scone.—The election, so far as Scone is concerned, passed off with a triumphant majority in favour of Captain Dumaresq; and certainly the Captain has great reason to congratulate himself upon having so stedfastly and undeviatingly pursued a line of conduct in his political career, which could, under the unfavourable circumstances in which he was placed, and the great influence which was brought to bear against him, secure him so decided an expression of the public opinion as the state of the poll at its close shows:—

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT.

MONDAY.

Before the Full Court.

THE QUEEN v. KINCHELA.

The Judges delivered judgment on the reserved points in this case separately—as follows.

Chief Justice.—The defendant in this case having been convicted of the abduction of a girl under sixteen, the Court was asked to grant a new trial, on the three following grounds. First, that the prosecutor did not call one of the witnesses, whose name was indorsed on the information. Secondly, that the Judge received evidence of a second act (or alleged act) of abduction, after proof of a previous similar act; and without compelling the prosecutor to elect, on which of the two he would rely. Thirdly, that the defendant was not allowed to cross-examine the girl, as to her having assigned a particular reason for quitting her father's house; being one supposed to be inconsistent with the fact, that she had quitted it by the procurement or persuasion of any one.

On the two first questions, we have none of us entertained any doubt. The calling of a witness whose name is on the indictment, at the instance of the party charged, is a matter entirely in the discretion of the Judge. But, to entitle the defendant to complain on that head, he should at least have applied for the examination of the omitted witness, at the trial. Then, as to the reception of evidence of a supposed second abduction. The defendant's counsel, Mr. Holroyd, cited a case, not reported, in which the Common Serjeant, on a prosecution for an assault, where (as here) there was only one count in the indictment, refused to allow proof of a second assault, after evidence had been given of one; although the latter was not the assault complained of, and the prosecutor abandoned, or desired to abandon, the first. That case was one, therefore, in which the right of election was refused. And, if the circumstances were such as to show, that the defendant came prepared to meet the first charge, or that the two offences were unconnected, so that one was neither introductory to nor explanatory of the other, the propriety of that refusal, and of the learned Judge's rejection of all proof of the second offence, would be apparent. In the absence, however, of fuller information as to the facts in that case, we cannot see how far it is applicable to the present; where the two elopements (supposing each to have constituted an abduction), were so connected together as almost to form one transaction.

According to the girl's account, she left her father's house on a certain evening, by previous arrangement with the defendant, and proceeded to a public house on the Parramatta road where he was to join and did join her. The publican's suspicions, however, having been excited, information was sent off to her father; and the defendant then obtained from her a consent to elope the next morning—for which purpose she was to enter a hackney-coach, at a place named by him. This, it was said, was evidence of an abduction; and therefore none should have been received, to establish a second on the following day. We are all of us, however, clearly of opinion, that the evidence was rightly—if not necessarily—admitted. Assuming the act relied on by the prosecutor, to have been the abduction effected on the last occasion, that was clearly connected with and explained by the former one. The events of the previous evening would have been admissible, on either of these grounds, had they not established an offence; and the fact that they happened to establish one, (if they did so,) can afford no sufficient reason for then compelling the prosecutor to stop, and so excluding evidence of the only charge in contest. But if, on the other hand, the abduction or elopement of the evening was relied on, as well as that of the following morning, the question then ceases to be one respecting the admissibility of evidence; and becomes one, simply, of election between the two cases—a matter of discretion, merely, with the Judge.

The admissibility of evidence against a prisoner, to prove the commission by him of an offence, (or, where necessary, any number of offences,) as auxiliary to the proof of the commission by him, of the offence with which he stands charged, is established by numerous cases. "Where several felonies are connected together, and form part of one entire transaction, then the one is evidence to show the character of the other." (2 Russ. Cr. by Greaves, 774.) The case cited by Mr. Holroyd of the King v. Birdseye, 4 C. and P. 386, is not quite to the point. There, several articles were taken at different times; and the question was, whether the prisoner could be convicted of stealing all, as one felony. In a case mentioned in Russell, evidence was received of three burglaries by the prisoner, on one indictment. There are similar instances, on trials for rape and arson. In one case, evidence was admitted of a previous murder, done by the procurement of the prisoner, to establish a motive for the murder by him of the person employed. In another case, evidence was given of the robbery of A by the prisoner, in order to show that he robbed B, who was in company with A. See the several cases, 2. Russ. Cr. 775. to 779. The only question is, whether the evidence of the other offences is necessary or material, to support the charge on which the prisoner is tried.

So much for the admissibility of the evidence. With respect to the other branch of the objection, that His Honor ought at least to have compelled the prosecutor to elect,—that is, to state for which offence he proceeded,—that is a matter of discretion in every case; and we think, that the Judge's discretion in this case was not unwisely exercised. The foundation of the practice is, that the prisoner might otherwise be embarrassed in his defence. No such consequence, however, could in this case have been apprehended. The two elopements, supposing each to have been relied on as evidence to establish an abduction, (which can scarcely be collected from what passed at the trial,) were so closely connected in time and circumstance, that the suggested embarrassment could scarcely, in the nature of things, have arisen;—and either might have been selected for the verdict, with indifference. In fact, however, the only elopement dwelt on by the Judge, as constituting the charge, was that which took place in the morning.

With respect to the rejection of the question proposed to be put to the daughter of the prosecutor, we have not been able to agree in opinion. The girl had given a circumstantial account of her elopement, tending to show (as I understand it) that the act was induced solely by the blandishments, or the request and persuasion of the defendant. The question asked on cross-examination was, whether she had not stated, on some other occasion, that she left home because of ill-treatment from her father. I think, that that question should have been allowed; because the answer to it, if in the affirmative, might not unreasonably have led the Jury to doubt, whether she really did elope at the solicitation of the defendant. It can be no answer to say, that there was or may have been (though I believe there was not) other evidence, to support her sworn statement. The object was, to cast discredit on that statement, by another apparently conflicting statement of her own. It is in my opinion not necessary to show, that the previous statement—assuming it to have been made—was necessarily conflicting. It is quite possible, that she might have denied having made such a statement. In that case, it would have been matter for consideration, whether a witness could have been called to contradict her. And, before that could be done, the name of the person to whom the supposed statement was made, as well as (it would seem) the time when, and place where made, should have been brought to her recollection. But, supposing her to have admitted the statement, the fact that she had made such a statement was, in my humble judgment, a very proper one for the consideration of the Jury, as bearing on the issue which they had to try.

It is not improbable, that she might have given a very satisfactory explanation of her first statement; showing that the two were perfectly reconcileable. For the immediate cause of her elopement may have been, the entreaty of the defendant; though she may have yielded to it, because of discomforts which she experienced at home. But, standing alone, and unexplained, a statement that she left home because of ill-treatment, is apparently in conflict with the statement, that she left it because of solicitations from a lover. If ill treatment induced her to leave home, the story of those solicitations may have been fictitious; and the carriage in which she fled, if not hired by herself, have been procured under very different circumstances, from those which she represented. The Jury, therefore, should have had both statements before them, that the effect of each might be considered.

I have not overlooked the circumstance, that the girl did not state, in terms, what induced her to elope. But the account which she gave of the circumstances under which she went away, and the arrangement immediately leading to it, necessarily involved such a statement. I should be inclined to hold, however, I confess, that the question objected to was admissible, on the ground that the answer would have shown the extent and degree of the defendant's guilt. A girl, anxious to quit her home because of ill usage, may have eloped on the very slightest encouragement—nay, all the persuasion (as in the case of Robins, 1. C. and K. 456,) may have been on her side. It is impossible to say, that such a case could be at all regarded, in point of criminality, as on a par with the one now presented to us. And I do not assent to the doctrine, that matters of that kind are to be excluded; as if nothing bore on the issue, but what touched the bald and naked question, whether the offence has been committed in point of law. I speak with difficulty on this point; because of my respect for the authority of Mr. Justice Dickinson, which I know is opposed to me. But, having occasion to express my own opinion, as at present advised, I have done so. The question, however, requires a more lengthened examination, than I need now bestow on it; as I think the evidence ought to have been received, in this case, on the ground first taken:—and eventually, perhaps, after argument, my impressions as to the admissibility of evidence in extenuation, may yield to those of my learned colleague.

On the subject of cross-examination, where the object is to impeach the credit of a witness, by former inconsistent conduct or statements, the authorities are not numerous; and the rules are laid down in terms, which throw very little light on it. Thus, in Mr. Phillip's treatise, p. 938, it is said—"On the question what matter is receivable in evidence, and what not receivable, for the purpose of contradicting a witness by proof of contrary statements, it is not possible to lay down any precise general rule. The evidence offered for that purpose, must relate to something stated by the witness, not wholly irrelevant to the matter in issue." The distinction is every where recognised, between questions proper to be put and answered, but to which the witness's answer is conclusive, and questions which are not only to be answered, but the answer to which, if false, may be contradicted. (Rosc. by Grainger, 181–2. Russ. Cr. 936.—1. Star. Ev. 190. 198.—) The former class comprehends all cases, where the question goes to affect the witness's credit, by conduct or otherwise, but the matter is not relevant to the issue;—while the latter respects cases, where the question touches matter which in some degree is relevant; or, in other words, which is not wholly irrelevant. So that questions may be asked, which tend to impeach a witness's character, or credit, even though wholly irrelevant; and à fortiori they may be asked, if not so—the practical difference being in the result. That is, the answer can only be contradicted, in cases of the latter class. In Sir W. Russell's book, the rule is put thus. "If the questions go merely to the witness's credit, and are in other respects collateral to that issue, evidence cannot be called to contradict the answers. If they not only go to his credit, but are also connected with the subject of enquiry, then it is allowable to call witnesses to contradict." 2 Russ. by Greaves, 936. The difficulty, however, of applying this rule, (or, in other words, of determining what is or not wholly irrelevant,) will be seen by reference to the cases in 2. Camp. 638; 7. C. and P. 350; 3. C. and P. 76; and 5. C. and P. 590.—But I conceive it to be clear, in a case of this kind, that a question tending to elicit the cause of the girl's eloping, or her reason for eloping, cannot be deemed wholly irrelevant; or unconnected with the issue. I think it also shown that the question was equally admissible, on the score of materiality, in respect of the tendency of the suggested statement, in itself, (however susceptible of explanation,) to affect the belief of that, which she made to the jury.

My conclusion is, therefore, though I express it with much deference, that the answer of the witness to the question, had it been in the negative, might have been contradicted; and, therefore, that the rejection of the question, and consequent exclusion of the alleged inconsistent statement, form legitimate grounds for a new trial.

Mr. Justice Dickinson.—I feel constrained to differ from the Chief Justice respecting the disallowance of the question to which he has alluded.

That question, as I collect from Mr. Justice Manning's report, was, "Have you not stated that the reason for leaving your father's house was the ill-usage you had received from him?"—The girl had previously stated, that the defendant asked her to elope, under a promise of marriage; that she consented; and that she accordingly did elope, with the prisoner's assistance.

I conceive, that all evidence must either be relevant to the issue before the Jury, or pertinent to the credit of a witness. I am aware of no case or dictum of approved text writers, to the effect that those matters may be laid before a Jury during a trial, which may affect the punishment to be awarded by the Judge after the delivery of the verdict.

I am of opinion, that no other witness could have deposed to what the girl had said before trial respecting the matter in issue, as proof of it; for such deposition would have directly contravened the ordinary rule as to the inadmissibility of hearsay evidence. For the same purpose she could not herself have been questioned as to the former statement, inasmuch as that was not made under the sanction of her oath. She might have been perhaps asked for that purpose, "whether she did not leave her father's house on account of his ill usage?" but not that she had made such a statement of her reason for deserting her family. It follows that no other witness could have deposed, nor could she herself have been cross-examined, as to what she had said before the trial respecting the matter in issue, except for the purpose of impeaching her credibility. For the last mentioned purpose (to introduce the testimony of other witnesses if necessary,) she might have been cross-examined as to any statement before the trial contrary to her evidence upon that occasion. The question, therefore, is, whether the suggested statement was contrary to the evidence she gave upon the trial of the defendant.

That question I think the Judge was bound to determine, before he permitted the statement to be laid before the jury. For on general principles, where a question arises as to the admissibility of evidence, the facts upon which its admissibility depend are to be determined by the Judge and not by the jury, (per Alderson B. in Bartlett v. Smith, 11 M. and W. 486; Phillips and Amos on Evidence, p. 304), in order that the jurymen in determining the issue on the record, may not have their minds distracted by the solution of collateral questions.

Now the suggested statement does not appear to me necessarily inconsistent with the evidence given by the girl, for she might have acted in pursuance of the defendant's solicitations, while her motive for so acting was to avoid her father's ill usage. The compliance with the defendant's proposal, and the motive for her acquiescence being different matters, (as to which see passim Lucas v. Nockells, 10 Bingh. 157; and Oakes v. Wood, 2 M. and W. 791), I think the suggested statement could not have been determined by the Judge to have been contrary to the girl's evidence, and therefore that his Honor was correct in allowing the objection to the question.

As I entirely agree with his Honor the Chief Justice on the other points, I am of opinion that there ought not to be a new trial of this indictment.

Mr. Justice Manning.—I also am unable to concur with the Chief Justice upon the question as to the rejection of evidence. The question put to the girl on cross-examination, and disallowed, was in these words—"Have you not stated that the reason for leaving your father's house, was the ill-usage you had received from him?" and I still think it was one which the defendant could not insist on having answered. Let it be assumed that the witness would have answered in the affirmative. How would the answer have been material to the enquiry before the Court? It would not have been directly relevant to the issue, because the Jury had to deal with the defendant's act, in "taking or causing the girl to be taken out of her father's possession without his consent," and not with her "reasons," for leaving the house; the law having thought proper to make such act criminal, notwithstanding the girl's consent, and her reasons for the part taken by herself being matter operative only upon her own will. Neither do I think the answer would have been material, in involving the witness in a discrepancy or contradiction which could have impaired her testimony as to those facts which directly established the issue. If she had previously stated that the defendant's persuasions were the sole cause of her elopement, or if she had made statements which necessarily implied the fact, then the answer would have been an apparent contradiction. But nevertheless such contradiction would have been readily referrible to the existence of that mixture of causes and considerations, by which almost every human act is influenced, and of which it commonly happens that different ones are at various times prominently recalled, and spoken of as the single motive of action. But she had made no such statements. She had simply narrated facts showing that the defendant had asked her to elope under a promise of marriage, that she had consented, and that she accordingly did so elope under arrangements made by him for the purpose; and if she had thereupon added that ill-usage at home had been assigned by herself, or that in fact it was the reason for her elopement, I should have regarded it as, at most, a mere superficial and verbal inconsistency, such as might be expected from any one not accustomed to a rigid mental analysis. I cannot indeed comprehend, how it is to be inferred from her evidence that the defendant's solicitations were, strictly speaking, the sole cause of her elopement, for this would be to suppose her absolutely passive and uninfluenced by considerations affecting her own happiness; nor that, on the other hand, she ever meant to state that ill-usage from her father was the sole cause of her going in a particular coach to meet a particular individual. But there is no difficulty in understanding that domestic discomfort, in her then present condition, may have assisted in creating a general desire to change it, and thus have inclined her more readily to accept it when proffered by one whose attractions might not have been sufficient, under happier circumstances, to overcome her sense of filial duty or her modesty. If this be the right understanding, then the answer sought by the contested question would be in no degree inconsistent with her original statements; but would merely suggest an explanation of the ready consent to the defendant's proposals, which she acknowledged to have given and acted upon. It only remains to consider whether the answer should have been received as evidence in mitigation. Without now discussing the question, whether evidence which has no other bearing upon the case should be admitted (where objected to) to proof before the Jury, or whether it should be reserved for submission to the Judge, between conviction and sentence, to which latter view I incline,—it is sufficient to say, that the girl having admitted consent and active participation, the excluded evidence could not, in my opinion, have further influenced the judgment of the Court in the award of sentence.

I wish to add, that in general I incline to receive evidence of a corresponding character, in favour of a prisoner, rather than incur the slightest risk of unduly excluding facts, which might legitimately operate to the advantage of one whose life or liberty is staked upon the issue; and I did so in this same case. But when the question we have been considering was objected to by the counsel for the prosecution, I was not uninfluenced by the consideration that the line of cross-examination proposed would tend, unnecessarily as it appeared, to widen the unfortunate breach already opened between parent and child.

His Honor Mr. Justice Manning, who tried the defendant, then passed the sentence of the Court upon him,—and in doing so said, that the Jury in bringing in their verdict did not find with what intention the defendant had abducted the girl in question, whether for the purpose of marriage or for seduction; if the former, no doubt the Court would have been influenced by it in passing sentence. The Court therefore had to look into the circumstances as proved in evidence, and upon viewing the whole of those circumstances, there was little doubt but that the defendant's intention was for the purpose of seducing the girl. The sentence of the Court therefore was, that he be imprisoned for nine calendar months, to be dated from the day of trial, and that portion which is yet to run, to be passed in Parramatta Gaol.

THE QUEEN, ON THE PROSECUTION OF J. R. HOLDEN, ESQ., v. B. C. RODD, GENT.

On a former day Mr. Broadhurst, on behalf of J. R. Holden, Esq., obtained a rule nisi, calling upon Mr. Rodd to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against him for writing a certain letter, &c.

It appeared from the facts disclosed in the affidavits on which the rule was obtained, that Mr. Rodd and Mr. Dawson, two partners, had of late years, first Mr. Rodd by himself, and then in partnership with Mr. Dawson, been acting as the attorneys of Mr. Holden, who, together with another, were the executors of Charles Smith, deceased. That in the course of the present year Messrs. Rodd and Dawson sent to Mr. Holden, who was the acting executor, their account against the estate, in two bills; the two together amounting to upwards of £171; the said bills were caused to be taxed by the executors, and the amount of the two inclusive was reduced to £158 and upwards. On the 12th of June, in the same year, the amount was paid by the executors through Mr. M'Culloch, (who in the mean time had been appointed solicitor to the estate of Mr. C. Smith,) who also then produced a written authority from them to demand all the documents, &c., relating to Smith's estate. These documents, &c., were eventually delivered up. On the 13th of June, Mr. Rodd, although in the name of the firm, yet in the postscript to the same, says he is personally responsible, writes to Mr. Holden and his co-executor, asking for an explanation as to the reasons of their business in the estate of Smith being so suddenly and apparently without an cause taken from them; in the postscript Mr. Rodd adds, "personally, I do not care a fig about the matter, but to be treated in such an ungentlemanly manner, after so many years, is provoking to me, and I make no disguise about it." To this letter no answer was sent, nor to others that were sent to Mr. Holden, asking for an answer to it. Finding that Mr. Holden would not answer this letter, nor acknowledge its receipt, Mr. Rodd wrote the letter which is the ground-work of the rule, and which letter is in the following words, viz., "Sydney, July 18th, 1848,—Sir, I saw your name in the Herald of this day, as having attended a meeting in the City School of Arts, as chairman, at which you could not obtain fair play. This circumstance must have reminded you of your uncivil and dastardly conduct in not giving me an answer or a hearing to the two or three letters which I have lately sent to you, and the conclusion that I and some of my friends have arrived at is, that you fear to commit yourself further by writing. As I may not have a convenient opportunity of speaking to you, I just add, that at one time I thought you a perfect gentleman, and an honest man, and I find that I have been deceived, and now I know that you are neither the one nor the other; and to my way of thinking, something worse, I am, &c., B. C. Rodd. To J. R. Holden, Esq." Mr. Holden swore that this letter was untrue, unfounded, and malicious; that it was written and sent for the purpose of provoking him to commit a breach of the peace; and in answer to a charge made by Mr. Rodd in the letter of the 13th of July, swore in addition, that the business was not withdrawn from Messrs. Rodd and Dawson in an uncourteous, abrupt, ungentlemanly, or insulting manner, but it was so withdrawn because it was believed to be the interest of the estate that it should be so withdrawn; and that the letter of Mr. Rodd, dated the 13th of June, was not answered, because it was couched in uncivil, insulting, and authoritative language; and further, because he considered Messrs. Rodd and Dawson had no right to demand the reason of his and co-executor's conduct. Upon these facts the rule nisi was granted; and

Mr. Broadhurst to day moved to make it absolute.

Mr. Lowe showed cause. He said, no doubt, looking at the relative station in society of each of these gentlemen, this application was made to the extraordinary jurisdiction of the Court, and would be guided by the same principles that could guide a similar application to the Court of Queen's Bench in the mother country. And first he would submit that not only must the letter complained of, in itself contain insulting language, but it must be shown, moreover, that it was the intention of the writer thereof, in using such language, to provoke a breach of the peace. It is true the words used by Mr. Rodd may have tended, but not intended, to have caused a breach of the peace. The learned counsel then examined the alleged libellous letter, and said he could not certainly justify some of the expressions there used; but though he could not justify them, he would submit whether the Court could construe it into a letter that was written to provoke a breach of the peace? He looked upon it rather as a mere venting of pent up indignation, and written with a view to pave the way for a paper war. This view of the case would be borne out by an examination of the whole circumstances. And resting here, he would urge, without taking into consideration the express denial of the imputed purport of the letter, and without regard to the not a little vexatious and annoying conduct of Mr. Holden, that a sufficient case had not been made for this extraordinary interference of the Court. To get the remedy he, Mr. Holden, now seeks, he must show beyond a doubt that his own conduct was free from blame, and that Mr Rodd's injury was unprovoked. Mr. Lowe then read through Mr. Holden's affidavit, on which the rule was obtained, and commented on the several statements it contained. He said, no doubt Mr. Rodd did feel annoyed and aggrieved at the irregular and discourteous conduct of Mr. Holden in so suddenly taking the business in Smith's estate from his firm, he having been employed in and about that business for years, and apparently with the greatest satisfaction to all parties, at least no complaints had been made. When the bills of cost already alluded to were proposed to be referred to some other solicitor, no answer was given to that request than by the service of an appointment to tax the bills; and which was eventually followed up by the withdrawal, by Mr. M'Culloch, on behalf of the executors, of all the papers, &c., relating to the estate. It was moreover natural, that Mr. Rodd,—indeed it was no other than his right, as he says himself, it would be the right of the commonest menial, to demand an explanation for Mr. Holden's conduct. Thinking he had that right, he wrote the letter dated the 13th June, and with the exception of the word "ungentlemanly" used in the postscript, &c., no human being could take offence at it. Mr. Holden would not, however, answer this, nor would he acknowledge its receipt; with the same silent neglect did he treat other notes written to him, to induce him to give his reasons for taking the business away. Doubtless this provoking and irritating manner, and certainly amongst gentlemen what has ever been deemed rather ungentlemanly conduct, the refusing either to answer a properly worded letter, or to acknowledge its receipt—operated upon the feelings of Mr. Rodd, and in the midst of his irritation, smarting under the insult in having all his letters silently passed over, wrote the letter complained of; the object of which cannot be construed into a provocative of a breach of the peace, but rather to wring from him, Mr. Holden, an explanation of the matters complained of. Affidavits of Mr. Dawson and Mr. Rodd were then read, explaining some of the matters already touched upon. Mr. Rodd solemnly denied that he intended or considered that the said letter would provoke Mr. Holden to commit a breach of the peace upon him, Mr. Rodd, either by assaulting him or sending him a challenge; and had not the most remote idea that it would excite Mr. Holden to take any notice of it, otherwise than by explanation of his conduct. In conclusion, Mr. Lowe submitted that the letter, although it contained expressions that could not be justified, yet regarding the intention with which the letter was written, it was not such a production that would provoke a breach of the peace; and was not one that would justify him, Mr. Holden, in the eyes of his fellow-men, to resent, by a breach of the peace. Secondly, it was distinctly denied that it was the writer's intention that it should lead to a breach of the peace. And thirdly, supposing the Court should be against him on the other points, then he submitted that Mr. Holden had not come before the Court in a position to demand this extraordinary interference, not being himself free from blame.

The Court here threw out a suggestion, as it had been freely admitted by the counsel for Mr. Rodd that there were expressions in the letter that could not be justified, and that, as the Court then imagined, Mr. Holden had not himself been entirely free from blame, having refused improperly to answer Mr. Rodd's letter, whether by mutual concessions the case could not be settled. The suggestion was not complied with, though an attempt was made to do so, and the argument was continued.

Mr. Broadhurst replied, and contended that the course adopted to-day was aggravating the libel contained in the letter. He denied that any attorney had a right to demand of his client the reasons for that client withdrawing his business from him. In this case, the client's were executors, and they had no right to compliment the interest of the estate they represented away to their friends. There might, indeed, be very good reasons for the withdrawal of that business, which Mr. Holden might not even now wish to state upon affidavit. What was true as to the right of a client to refuse to give an explanation as to the reasons for withdrawing business, was equally true as to a party written to, especially in an offensive way, not answering the same. It is quite evident here, that the real gravamen of the charge Mr. Rodd had to make against Mr. Holden was the loss of the business. And deny it as he might, directly or indirectly—either way would be insufficient in point of law—the letter he wrote on the 18th of July was libellous, and its tendency and intention was to cause Mr. Holden to commit a breach of the peace. This was quite clear, and if the Court were of this opinion, the case was one [illegible] worthy of the Court's interference, so as to prevent parties from taking the law into their own hands.

The Chief Justice: I, in common, did think, with the rest of the Court, in the opinion that fell from the Court, that Mr. Holden was wanting in courtesy towards Mr. Rodd, in not answering his numerous communications; and that this circumstance might have in a measure justified the subsequent conduct of Mr. Rodd; but I have now changed that opinion. I do think that Mr. Holden was not bound to answer the letter of the 13th of June, the one containing the postscript, wherein he alludes to his ungentlemanly conduct. This was the first letter asking the reasons, and containing as it did that objectionable charge, Mr. Holden might well abstain from answering it, and all the others subsequent to it. There may be some excuse for Mr. Rodd's being annoyed and irritated at the conduct of Mr. Holden, when it is considered that he had the conduct of the business for years, and that it was so suddenly withdrawn from him in rather an annoying and unusual way; yet for all this we cannot help arriving at the conclusion that the letter of the 18th of July was libellous and wholly inexcusable—at all events, no sufficient excuse to our minds has been given to prevent us from arriving at the conclusion that this is a very proper case to submit to the determination of a jury. The rule, therefore, will be made absolute.

Mr. Rodd then said, that considering as Mr. Lowe had disposed of the case, and with the consent of the counsel on the other side, as also with the permission of the Court, though at the eleventh hour, he would state that after having heard the strong opinion of the Court expressed against him, he had no hesitation in saying that he was not justified in writing the letter of the 18th of July, and that he regretted having done so.

Mr. Broadhurst then, on behalf of Mr. Holden, said, that his client was perfectly satisfied.

The rule was then discharged with costs.

TUESDAY.

Before the Primary Judge.

TURNER AND OTHERS v. MAUGHAN.

On a former day (Saturday), a motion was made, that the plaintiffs should accept short notice of motion, to dissolve a certain injunction granted herein; the order was granted.

The Solicitor-General now, on behalf of the defendant, was about to move to dissolve the injunction, when

Mr. Broadhurst, on behalf of the plaintiffs, objected to the Court now entertaining the application; first, on the ground that the Court had improvidently made the order for short notice; and secondly, that the order did not state that the plaintiffs were to accept short service of the affidavits on which the order was obtained. The affidavits were not filed on the day when the order was obtained, though copies of affidavits were served, but not in time, according to the practice of the Court.

The Solicitor-General was heard on these objections.

The Primary Judge yielded to the objection, and dismissed the application, but not with costs; and said, that though he was not clearly of opinion that the order was made improvidently, yet that when it was made, he, the Primary Judge intended that at the time of the service of the order all the affidavits necessary for the motion should be served too.

SMITH AND OTHERS v. SALTING AND OTHERS.

This was a suit instituted by the trustees of the insolvent private estate of John Hosking, to recover certain moneys from the defendants, merchants, in respect of the sale of wools, &c., of the insolvent, made by them. The defendants, in their answer, claimed a right to set-off against such claim all sums of money due to them under a joint and several covenant of Hughes and Hosking. The Primary Judge had decided that the defendants were entitled to make such set-off; and the Full Court, upon appeal, affirmed such decree. Amongst other things, it was referred by the decree to the Master to take an account, &c., of what was due to Hosking and his trustees,—and of what was due from the private and co-partnership accounts of Hughes and Hosking to the defendants. It appeared that so far as the defendants' claim to set-off was concerned, it arose upon payments made on account of Hughes and Hosking, by orders, &c.; these were very numerous, and to give strict legal proof of them it would be necessary to summon witnesses from all parts of the colony, and to ask for Commissioners to examine witnesses now in Europe.

The Solicitor-General, with whom was Mr. Fisher, now on behalf of the defendants, moved that they may be at liberty to prove before the Master the items of their set-off by the entries and memoranda thereof in the check books, pass books, cash books, and journals, &c., of the above defendants; and by the production of the several receipts, &c., to be admitted by the said Master as vouchers, without further proof than the mere production thereof. The said items, however, to be allowed without prejudice to the plaintiff's right to impeach and disprove the same. It was shown by the affidavits read, the course of the dealing of the defendants in respect of these payments, that the books, &c., were in the same state now as when the entries were made, and that application had been made to the plaintiffs to make such allowance as was now asked for, but it was refused. It was also shown that by the adoption of this course an immense sum would be saved to all parties to the suit. Several text books and authorities were cited to show that a court of equity had power to make the order asked for.

Mr. Broadhurst showed cause, and contended that no authority had been cited, nor could such a case be cited, where a court of equity had decided that that which was not according to the well known and well established rules of evidence—evidence, should be evidence. If the Court were decided, as invited to do, such would be the effect of the decision. It would be an invasion of the rule that a man cannot make evidence for himself.

The Solicitor-General replied.

His Honor reserved judgment.

SMITH AND ANOTHER v. SALTING AND ANOTHER.

Mr. Broadhurst applied for an order ex parte, directing one of the defendants to bring into the Master's Office, within four days, certain books of the firm of Flower, Salting, and Co., containing entries relating to the transactions, the subject of the suit. The motion was made upon the certificate of the Master, that the books had been ordered to be left in the defendant's office, but that the plaintiffs should be at liberty to inspect. An affidavit was also produced setting forth the refusal to allow inspection of certain parts of the books, such refusal being made under the advice of the defendants' solicitor.

His Honor held that this was not a case for an ex parte application, as in the case of a motion for such an order upon the Master's certificate of order to produce, and default; because the affidavit may be contradicted, but not so the Master's certificate.

His Honor intimated that he would sit next Friday.

WEDNESDAY.

Nisi Prius Sittings.

Before His Honor Mr. Justice Dickinson.

This Court did not sit to-day for want of jurymen. The following gentlemen were fined £3 for non attendance:—Thomas Ware Smart, Thomas Whistler Smith, David Francis Scott, Henry Gilbert Smith, A. B. Sparke, and James Simmons, Esqrs. His Honor intimated that if the same gentlemen did not attend to-day they would each be fined £5 in addition.

INSOLVENCY.

Before their Honors the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Manning.

RATTRAY, &c., v. ABRAHAM AND SAUL LYONS.

This was an application in the nature of a compulsory sequestration. The case was tried before the full Court on last Wednesday, when the plaintiff presented a primâ facie case of the defendants having committed an act of insolvency by not satisfying or by pointing out sufficient disposable property to satisfy a certain writ of fi. fa. The defendant, Saul Lyons, consented, so far as he was concerned, to be made insolvent; but the other defendant offered evidence to show that sufficient disposable property had been pointed out to the officer executing the writ. The Court then admitted, that the plaintiff had established the usual primâ facie case, but expressed a doubt whether the evidence to rebut that case had not effectually done so. Not being satisfied they exercised the power conferred upon them by the Insolvent Act, and adjourned the further hearing of the case until to-day. Accordingly to-day, the case came on again. In consequence of a dispute taking place at the outset, between the Counsel for either party, as to who was to begin, first, the Court decided, that as the plaintiff had already established his primâ facie case, it was for the defendants to improve now the case already presented by them; that this additional evidence could be contradicted, if necessary, by the plaintiff; that then the defendants should have the right of reply upon this last evidence, and of course it would be open to the plaintiff to have a general reply. This being the case, the following witness was called on behalf of the defendant A. Lyons, by the Solicitor-General.

Mr. Simeon Cohen: Looking at the description of the land advertised in the Herald, as intended to be sold, I see there are two lots at Maitland. I have collected the rent of that land for the Messrs. Lyons. It was let for £300 or £400 a year; this was in 1844. The market value of that land would be about £1800 to £2000. I am authorised to offer £1600 for it. I would have purchased it at that price under the Sheriff's sale.

Cross-examined: The rents have fallen; I was authorised to make a purchase yesterday.

This was the additional case for the alleged insolvent.

The following additional evidence was then adduced on behalf of the petitioning creditort by Mr. Fisher.

Mr. P. Long, solicitor: I am solicitor for Mr. Saul Lyons; I have the title deeds for a portion of the property just spoken of; it is his private property; a bill in equity is pending in respect of that property; I have the title deeds vesting the legal property in Saul Samuel. The rents have been of late paid under an indemnity. The legal estate is in Mr. Saul Samuel, and the equity bill is against him, as such owner. Mr. Rosseter is a tenant of part of the property; the letter produced is in the handwriting of Messrs. Rodd and Dawson; and it is addressed to Mr. Rosseter. [The letter was now read, and it was a demand for rent on behalf of Mr. Saul Samuel.] Land at Bankstown and Port Macquarie, if sold by the Sheriff by auction, would not fetch 5s. an acre; I know land at Bankstown was sold lately at 2s. per acre; land at Port Macquarie is almost unsaleable.

Cross-examined: Saul Samuel, is trustee of the property; Samuel is at Wellington, in this colony; I know Samuel's name was used in the deed without his knowledge; I know Saul Lyons has got the money for the rents.

Re-examined: At Sheriff's sales land always fetches a less price than at other sales; at such sales the Sheriff does not state the title of the property.

Mr. Samuel Lyons: I put up the land at Port Macquarie; I could not get a purchaser for it; land there is unsaleable.

Mr. Saul Lyons: The land at Banks Town is unimproved; if put up at auction it would not realise more than 2s per acre; the land at Port Macquarie is unimproved land.

Cross-examined: Of the property at Maitland, I obtained a deed made in favour of Saul Samuel without his consent; he has no interest in that property, and never had; Abraham Lyons has been for some time in England; Abraham Lyons did threaten a suit against me; I have a farm at the Wollombi; it is in the name of Saul Samuel also; it is my private property. I did not point out that property, because it was not the partnership property. The Samuel who levied against us, is different to the one mentioned in the deed; that farm may be worth about £100. Samuel is my trustee, but without being so characterised in the deed; the absolute property appears to be vested in Samuel.

The Solicitor-General replied upon this evidence, contending that it was quite clear that sufficient property had been pointed out to satisfy the writ at the suit of the plaintiff, as well as the other writ in the Sheriff's Office. At any rate, for the purpose of this harsh proceeding, the property ought to have been submitted to public competition to ascertain whether it would or not be sufficient.

The Court, without troubling Mr. Fisher to reply, decided at once that they were quite satisfied that the property pointed out was not sufficient to satisfy the writ at the suit of Samuel, and the writ at the suit of the present plaintiff, those two writs being endorsed together for upwards of £2000, and therefore that the rule for the compulsory sequestration ought to be made absolute against both defendants.

CONFIRMATION OF CERTIFICATES.

The Chief Commissioner moved the confirmation of the certificates granted to Mary Anne Smith, Girolamo Carandini, John Von Mangerhoussen Weiss, and William M'Laren. Allowed.

RELEASE OF ESTATES.

The Chief Commissioner moved that the estates of William Edward Rowland and Michael Higgins should be released from sequestration, in consequence of the insolvents having entered into a composition with their creditors. The motion was granted.

A thirty-acre farm at the Hawkesbury, situate at eleven miles from Windsor, also put up for sale by Mr. Polack, was bought in at £125.

The Battles of the Elections.—There were three cases of assault for adjudication before the Police Court, on Tuesday, arising out of the late city election. The two first were cross actions, Connel v. Wright and Wright v. Connel. The first only was gone into. Both parties were residents in Castlereagh-street. In the course of the evening of Friday last, the complainant was expressing his opinion about the election and "honest men," when some observations which he made reaching the defendant's ear, he was attacked by [illegible] when blows were exchanged, and both [illegible] to the ground. The defen[illegible] charge in toto, and accused [illegible] committing the assault on him, [illegible] charged him with the [illegible] witness, a third neighbour, [illegible] came up on hearing a cry [illegible] der, when he fou[illegible] lying on the ground, [illegible] laughter, that one of them wear[illegible] guernsey, he narrowly escaped [illegible] kicked by him, as in the darkness he took him, from the noise the other was making, for a large Newfoundland dog of his (the witness's) which he thought had broke loose from his chain. Both parties were, however, so strongly interlocked in their struggling, that he had great difficulty in "wrenching" them apart. This witness making an observation that his advice to the litigants had been that they had better shake hands and "drop" the case, the Bench held the suggestion to be a good one, and eventually the case was dismissed.—A similar decision attended the cross case, the Bench refusing to entertain it. The third case was one preferred by Mr. Simms, of Parramatta-street, against Richard Crampton, of the same street. According to Mr. Simms statement, it appeared on Saturday afternoon the defendant came into his shop, and accused him of making some observations respecting him, and also concerning some proceedings at the election. The complainant denied making observations respecting the defendant, and was replying in answer to the other part of the charge, when the defendant stopped the conclusion of them by using an offensive term, and hitting him a heavy blow on the mouth. The case was disposed of by the defendant being ordered to enter into twelve months sureties of the peace, himself in £40 and two sureties of £20 each.

Police Office.—The magistrates present yesterday were the Mayor, Captain Innes, and Mr. Moir. M. L. Myles, the second magistrate on the roster, did not attend his appointment. Messrs. Ogilvie and Ramsay are summoned for to-day.

Burglary. — Between seven o'clock on Tuesday evening and the same hour yesterday morning an entrance was effected into the office of Mr. Bibb, the architect, in Macquarie-street, by making a hole in a fourteen-inch brick wall. A case of mathematical instruments and a pair of German silver candlesticks were carried off, but there is every reason to suppose the burglars were disturbed, as some valuable articles in the office were left untouched, and a press which contained a large sum of money showed no signs of having been attempted to be forced.

Abatement of Nuisances.—Mr. Inspector Stubbs, on Tuesday appeared before the Police Bench to prosecute three parties for infractions of the City Police Act. The first case entered on was against a person of the name of Gerard, the proprietor of a cooperage in George street. The offence charged was the burning of a quantity of shavings, &c., in a cask in the street alluded to. Captain Innes said in this case he should not call on the defendant to plead, but fine on view. The offence was a most barefaced one, and in burning the casks, the defendant had blocked up the whole of the footpath, so that passengers had to leave it and go into the carriage way, which was at the time exceedingly dirty. The defendant admitting the offence, and submitting it was committed in ignorance of its being one, Captain Innes remarked that he should impose a low fine, in the hope it would serve as a caution against its repetition. —A fine of 5s. and 5s. costs was then imposed. The second prosecution was against the driver of a hackney carriage, named John Brown, for being away from the care of his horses, on the 15th ultimo, when his carriage was standing at the corner of Cumberland-street, whereby on the animals running away, Mr. Bland's gig was come in contact with and greatly damaged. Mr. Bland's coachman being called and not appearing, Mr. Stubbs stated that it had been intimated to him that Mr. B. did not desire to proceed in the case, and he therefore, (Mr. S.), could have no wish to do so. The case was then dismissed.—The third information was against a hay and corn dealer of the name of Short, residing in Bathurst-street. The offence charged was the obstruction of the footway by the exposure of goods. The Inspector, after proving the offence, added that the exposure of hay, straw, and green stuff, was a practice he was most desirous of putting down, as on a windy day it got blown about, and settled in the curb channels, the result of which was that on rain falling, the water-courses and drains became choked, and the streets were consequently flooded. A fine of 5s. with 15s. 6d. costs was adjudged.

Clothes Stealing.—A woman of the name of Ann Johnson was on Tuesday before the Police Court, charged by Mrs. Farrel, a resident in Sherwin's-lane, George-street South, with the theft of a child's frock. The prosecutrix and the prisoner reside in adjoining houses, and the former not entertaining any great opinion of the prisoner's honesty, a view which the Court from long observation shared in, directed one of her children, on Saturday afternoon, to keep a close watch after some clothes which were hanging out in a yard to dry. Shortly after these instructions had been given, the child, a girl of about six years of age, ran into her mother crying, saying that the prisoner had pulled her little sister's frock from off the line. On this, Mrs. Farrel's husband went to the prisoner's house and demanded the return of the article, when its possession was denied; but it was subsequently given up by Johnson's husband, on an intention being expressed of police interference being had recourse to. Johnson's plea was, that a little child of hers had picked up the frock and brought it to her, but the string showing, it had been forcibly detached from the line, induced the Bench to confirm the statement made to the prosecutrix by her child, and the prisoner was sentenced for pilfering, three months' imprisonment in Darlinghurst Gaol.

A Street Bargain.—A man of the name of Henry M'Carthy was on Tuesday brought before the Police Court by a person named Benjamin Nichols, residing in Pendray's-buildings, Castlereagh-street, who charged him with having a coat stolen from him in his possession. Nichols stated that the garment was purloined from behind a door in his house on the 19th ultimo, since which time he had never seen it until he recognised it on the previous day on M'Carthy's back, on meeting him in the street. The prisoner was entirely unknown to him, and he had no reason to suspect M'Carthy, from such circumstances as had come to his knowledge at the time the theft was committed, of his being the perpetrator of it. M'Carthy met the charge by stating that he had bought the coat publicly of a man at the Hay market, who was offering it for sale, and that at the time of the sale his wife was present, and he believed a policeman was standing by. A cross-examination of the prosecutor eliciting that he did not refuse to give up the coat when demanded by Nichols, but that he accompanied that person to the Police Office to see if it was right he should do so,—coupled with an intimation that through the policeman who it was alleged was present at the purchase being found out the seller might be traced,—the charge was remanded until yesterday, in order that the real thief might be got at. The attempt made, however, was not successful, but M'Carthy was discharged on his promise to give the coat to its owner.

A Hired Servant's Case.—A man of the name of Samuel Henwood, a hired servant to Mr. Garland, the wheelwright, was on Monday brought under magisterial notice, charged with a breach of the Hired Servants' Act in disobedience of orders and insolence. The defendant, it appeared, having some time since an execution in his house at the instance of Alderman Fisher, for about £12 for rent, Garland became answerable for that amount on that gentleman's withdrawal of the writ, on the promise of the debt being liquidated at the rate of 6s. per week; conditioned, that the defendant should remain in his (Garland's) service until it had been wholly discharged. Henwood, however, seemed to consider that as he was himself paying the 6s. a week to Alderman Fisher, he had a right to leave Garland's service, and as the latter would not allow of this, pursued every possible species of annoyance towards him. As the nature of the agreement was disputed, the case was remanded for Alderman Fisher's evidence, until Tuesday, when that gentleman attended, and fully confirmed the complainant's statement of a promise having been [illegible] to remain with [illegible] was satisfied. [illegible] that although [illegible] denied [illegible] the Bench [illegible] the length of time [illegible] known to them, the assertion [illegible] not be credited by them; and even in the event of its being correct, a remedy was open to Henwood, but who, as the agreement was certainly a valid one, and of effect until Alderman Fisher's debt was discharged, he must return to Garland's service. Henwood, offering some opposition, the Bench continued, that as he was a man with a large family, they had no desire to send him to gaol, and judgment would therefore be postponed until a future day

Inquest.—An inquest was held yesterday by Mr. Ryan Brenan, at Ward's, the Sportsman, Parramatta-street, touching the death of a man named Enoch Booty, then lying dead in May's-lane, Blackwattle Swamp. The history of the case as shown by the evidence was, that the deceased, who had been throughout the previous and subsequent days in his usual spirits, had risen yesterday morning at seven o'clock, and according to a practice he generally pursued, lighted the fire and put the kettle on. On his wife's rising about an hour afterwards she missed the deceased, and at the moment took no notice of the circumstance, but on her going out a few minutes afterwards into the yard at the rear of the premises, she found the deceased hanging in the stable. The wife of the deceased stated he had been for some time past in ill health, but she could assign no reason for the rash act committed by him: a neighbour, however, who had been well acquainted with him, gave testimony that he had at times shown symptoms of his mind being affected by drink. The requisite medical evidence as to the immediate cause of death having been given by Dr. Tierney, the jury returned a finding that the deceased destroyed himself whilst suffering under temporary insanity.

Valuable Building Allotment in College-street, Hyde Park.—We are requested by Mr. Mort to call particular attention of our readers to his sale of a very valuable building allotment, situate in College-street, Hyde Park, to take place at his rooms, this day, at twelve o'clock.—Communicated.

Mr. Mort particularly calls the attention of merchants, exporters, shipowners, captains, and others, to his imperative sale, this day, of pork, black oil, and whalebone.—Communicated.

Important Sale.—Ironmongers, dealers, and others are reminded that the large sale of ironmongery, &c., to be held this day, by Mr. Samuel Lyons, at his Mart, will commence precisely at 11 o'clock. As the sale will be without reserve, all parties will find it worth their while to attend. For particulars, see our advertising columns.—Communicated.

NEWS FROM THE INTERIOR.

(From our own Correspondent.)

CAMDEN.

August 1.—The unopposed election of Mr. James Macarthur for the county has afforded us the highest satisfaction, not only because the country at large will be benefitted by the refined and exalted patriotism of such a man, but because he is as it were our peculiar property, and we are proud of him beyond what we can express. On the arrival of the news of his return, our villagers felt that kind of joy which ebulliates in squibs and crackers, and all such corruscations of fun and frolic. Accordingly an immensely large pile of wood, towards the erection of which every villager contributed in either kind or money, was forthwith erected on the hill near the church, and when it grew dark the inhabitants in a body advanced towards the hill, and the torch was applied by the oldest resident. The flames ascended a hundred feet into the air, like the beacon of a happy day for Camden, and simultaneously three good English cheers were shouted for James Macarthur, followed by a report of fire-arms, which was responded to by the loyal inhabitants of the environs. Three cheers were also given for Mr. Charles Cowper, with the hope that he may be returned for Cumberland. Many grandiloquent speeches were made by the villagers, some of whom are first-rate politicians, and we heard one of them declaring to the effect that he did not desire that Mr. James or William Macarthur should get into the Council, for if they did the speaker would lose the sight of their kind and happy faces in the village, which so frequently at present made them feel that they had something paternal to look up to. After many speeches and toasts, and cheers for the Queen, the Governor, the Council, &c., &c., this loyal party broke up about midnight, their spirits and the flame flickering in union.

This district has not participated in the extensive rains which appear to have fallen in other parts. There has been a great deal of frost since our last; but a few very acceptable showers are now falling.

The mutton hams found secreted near Razorback, and advertised for sale by the Camden police, were claimed last Saturday, by Mr. Manning, of Yass, who bought them in at the auction.

There is not one in this district who does not feel reverence for the memory of the late Mr. M'Leay, whose kind heart and unostentatious virtues had endeared him to all who knew him. He has departed as the good man should, full of days and honours, and is we trust enjoying the meed of a life spent in usefulness and Christian charity,—the resurrection of the just.

BATHURST.

Coroner's Inquest.—On Friday, the 28th, an inquest was held at the Plough Inn, Russell-street, on the body of a woman named Holdsworth, who had met her death by accidentally falling down a well. From the evidence it appeared, that no one actually saw the affair, but it was supposed that the deceased had been drawing up a bucket of water from the well, and from weakness, she having been some time unwell, in endeavouring to bring the bucket to land, was unable to do so, lost her balance, and was precipitated down the well, a depth of upwards of 50 feet. The first discovery of the circumstance was by a neighbour who, seeing a bucket that he knew belonged to the deceased standing near the well, suspected what had taken place; he went to her residence, and finding her absent, immediately gave the alarm, assistance was speedily procured, and a man was lowered down the well and the body was found, but life was extinct. It was supposed she was dead before she reached the bottom, as there were several bruises about the skull, supposed to have been received from concussions from the sides of the well in her fall. The woman was stated to be perfectly sober. Verdict, accidental death, from falling down a well.

Robbery.—On Saturday night, 29th, some daring thieves stole two saddles from a stable at Mrs. Black's Inn. It appears that the yard is generally secured by locking the gates at night, and the parties committing the robbery must have scaled the fence near a small garden, as traces of foot marks were found there, which may probably lead to the apprehension of the thieves. The stable had been locked, but there are two windows, with jalousie blinds that shift up and down for ventilation, four bars out of these blinds had been removed, and thus access had been gained to the stable.

PORT MACQUARIE.

Hospital.—The government having handed over to the inhabitants of this town all the furniture, &c., formerly in use at the convict hospital here, a public meeting was held at the hospital, on Wednesday, the 12th instant, for the purpose of electing a President and Committee of the institution. The Rev. Mr. Cross was in the chair, and the meeting was addressed by several gentlemen, and the various resolutions necessary to put the institution in motion were proposed and passed nem. dis., and amongst the rest, one to request His Excellency to become patron. Lieutenant-Colonel Grey, J.P., Warden of the district, was elected President, and Mr. Maxwell Thomson, Honorary Secretary. At a meeting of the committee on the following day, Mr. James Macintyre was elected as surgeon, at a salary of £30 per annum. The subscription list we are happy to record is progressing favourably, and we have no doubt that if this institution is managed properly, free from all those petty bickerings, and want of unanimity, which have hitherto destroyed the best interests of this town and district, it will receive extensive patronage from the neighbouring districts, which have not the means within themselves of supporting separate establishments. Notices for meetings to be held for the formation of a hospital, were issued on two or three different occasions [illegible] months since, but unfortunately a sufficient number of persons could not upon either occasion be got together to put the much needed institution in motion. Whether private or public interest, or a combination of both, have now induced the prime movers in this present meeting to come forward, we care not, as the ulterior object is good; but we cannot avoid saying that had they shown as much zeal when the matter was first mooted, the institution would have been in existence months ago. We trust that now they have entered into something like unanimity, they will continue in their good work and "go on and prosper."

Inquest.—A coroner's inquiry was held on Saturday, the 15th instant, at Blackman's Point, before James Macintyre, Esq., coroner, on the body of Grace Linney, who had been killed the evening previous by a dray passing over her body. A jury of five were summoned from this town, and had to travel a distance of ten miles to view the body. Richard Linney, the husband of the deceased, deposed that he resided at Rolland's Plains, and that his wife had left her home about twelve o'clock on Friday, for the purpose of proceeding to Port Macquarie on business, at which time she was sober. John Palmer deposed, that he was coming from the Plains with his dray, in company with another dray, which was driven by a man named Thomas Smith, and upon which the deceased was riding. He was in front, and about eight o'clock on Friday evening Smith came and told him that the deceased had fallen off the dray, and was killed. He then stopped his team, and went to the body, and found it lying on its face in a deep rut. He lifted the body out, life was quite gone. The wheel of the dray had passed over the body of the deceased just below the arm-pits, and also over one arm; the body and the arm were completely crushed. The deceased was drunk. Thomas Smith deposed that he was driving the dray, upon which the deceased was riding, about eight o'clock; he was at the head of his bullocks when his attention was attracted by a shriek. He immediately stopped his bullocks and went to the dray, where he found the deceased had fallen off, and saw her lying in the state described by the last witness, whom he immediately went for. The Jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased had met her death by the wheel of the dray passing over her body, from off which she had fallen whilst in a state of intoxication. — Another inquest was held at the Speed the Plough inn, before the Coroner, on Thursday, the 20th instant, on the body of Billy, an aboriginal black, who had died that morning. It appeared that Billy had been very drunk the previous evening, and had slept at the side of a fence the whole of the night, which was very wet and boisterous, from the exposure to which it was supposed he died, and the jury returned a verdict to that effect.

Representation.—We perceive that Mr. M'Leay does not intend again to come forward for the united districts of Stanley, Gloucester, and Macquarie. Whether we are likely to have a representative at all we do not know, as we have only heard a rumour that it was the intention of Mr. A. Boyd to come forward. We trust he will do so. The voters in this district will not have an opportunity of voting, as there will be no means of communicating to them what candidates may come forward previous to the day of election.

Police Office.—There has been a little excitement in this department of the "public works" this past week or two, in consequence of charges and counter charges of assault of Mr. John Gordon v. Captain Wm. Oldrey, R.N., and vice versa, having been brought forward for adjudication. As the hearing of the counter charge has been postponed until the 8th proximo, we will not enter into details at present, but will give the full particulars when the second case is decided.

ELECTORS OF SYDNEY, — The freedom of election was maintained today by your representative, William Charles Wentworth! He plumped for Lawson!!! Yes, the man of your choice has chosen Lawson in preference to Cowper and Smith. Does Wentworth want the Speakership? Has Lawson promised him his support?

THE GREATEST CURES OF ANY MEDICINE IN THE GLOBE.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

SURPRISING CURE OF RHEUMATISM.

"Little Bally Bong, Port Phillip Road, "January 16, 1848.

"I hereby certify, that my wife, Lydia Rochford, was affected with Rheumatism in the head for fifteen months, and although attended by good medical practitioners she got no relief. It so affected the palate of her mouth, so much so that she could not articulate her words properly. I was advised to try Holloway's Pills and Ointment, which I did administer to her, and she continued to use them for two months. I can now say they have restored her to her usual state of good health; and for the sake of humanity I now make this public.

"(Signed) JAMES ROCHFORD."

CELEBRATED THROUGHOUT THE GLOBE.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—CURE OF FISTULOUS SORES AND PLEURISY.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Robert Calvert, Chemist, Stokesley, dated September 3, 1847.

To Professor Holloway.

Sir,—Mr. Thompson, National Schoolmaster of this town, desires me to send you the particulars of his son, who had been bad for three years and a half, and has received the greatest benefit by the use of your pills and ointment. He is of a scrofulous constitution: a pleurisy had left a large collection of matter in the chest, this eventually formed a passage through the wales of the chest, and ended in three fistulous sores which discharged large quantities of pus, when he was induced to try your pills and ointment; at this date he was apparently in a dying condition; the stomach rejected everything it took. Your pills and ointment had the effect of completely curing both the cough and stomach affections, his strength and flesh are also restored, his appetite keen, and digestion good. There is every prospect that a little further continuance of your medicines will finish the cure.

MOST VALUABLE BUILDING ALLOTMENT, COLLEGE-STREET, HYDE PARK.
MR. MORT
Is instructed to sell by public auction, at his Rooms,
THIS DAY, 3RD AUGUST,
At 12 o'clock,
ONE of the most valuable Building Allotments in the City, situate in the SALUBRIOUS NEIGHBOURHOOD OF HYDE PARK.
The following are the particulars extracted from the title:—
"All that piece or parcel of land, situate, lying, "and being, in the Parish of St. Lawrence, "in the city of Sydney aforesaid, allotment "number one of the sub-division of the "land comprised in the original grant to Sir "Francis Forbes, of the 20th day of De-"cember, one thousand eight hundred "and thirty-five; bounded on the south by "the south side of a brick wall, forming the "southern boundary of the said grant, com-"mencing on the east side of College-street, "and bearing south-easterly one hundred "feet three inches to the western boundary "of the Woolloomooloo Estate; on the east "by a brick wall, being the western boun-"dary of the Woolloomooloo Estate, bearing "north-easterly sixty-four feet seven inches "to the south boundary line of lot 22, sold "to W. C. Wentworth; on the north by the "south boundary line of lot 22, the south "side of a reserved lane fourteen feet wide, "and the south boundary line of lot 2, sold "to John Wood, being a line bearing by "compass west three degrees, south 121 feet "6 inches to College-street aforesaid; and "thence on the west by a brick wall, being "the east side of College-street, bearing by "compass south three degrees, east twenty-"five feet to the commencing point."
The above allotment is situate in College-street, Hyde Park, Burdekin's-terrace, being the south boundary, and the house occupied by Mr. Deane, music master, its northern boundary. At the rear are bringing in a weekly rental of fifteen shillings, and all let to good tenants.
. There is plenty of room for building a good house, independent of the cottages, and the situation is unquestionably first-rate, and almost the only one for sale in its delightful neighbourhood.
Terms at sale. 1894

TO CAPITALISTS.

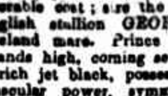
IN THE SUPREME COURT OF NEW SOUTH WALES.
Sheriff's Office,
Sydney, August 2, 1848.
King v. Pollard.
Others v. Same.
ON MONDAY NEXT, the 7th instant, at Noon, at the residence of the defendant, at the Glebe, near Sydney, the Sheriff will cause to be sold a quantity of household furniture, &c., unless these executions are previously satisfied.
CORNELIUS PROUT,
1871 Under Sheriff.



TO STAND this season, at Albert Vale, near Gunning, county of King, the much admired Horse PRINCE OF WALES, recently purchased by the proprietor at considerable cost; sire the renowned imported English stallion GEORGE IV.; dam a Cleveland mare. Prince of Wales stands 16½ hands high, coming seven years old, is of a rich jet black, possessing good temper, muscular power, symmetry, and action, and whose stock for general usefulness (racing excepted) stands unrivalled. Therefore persons desirous of adding such an acquisition to their establishments, should not fail in availing themselves of the services of this truly celebrated horse. Terms for single mare, £1. 5s.; two or more, the bona fide property of one owner, £1 2s. 6d. each, groomage included. The whole of the rich and spacious forest attached to the vale being now securely enclosed for the reception of mares, a doubt does not exist of there being an abundant supply of pasturage, with well watered paddocks; but the proprietor will not be responsible for accidents or losses. All payments to be made on or before the 1st January, 1849. No mares to be removed until paid for; every mare remaining after that date will be charged for at the rate of 2s. per week.
